Dear Friends of the Preborn,

Our new sidewalk counseling literature which we produced here at Missionaries to the Preborn has been well received and orders have gone out all across the nation! We give thanks to the Lord for this opportunity to impact so many lives through those who take time to stand outside America's deathcamps. Take note below of the Sidewalk Counseling Training Session.

The Missionaries continue to go out to the deathcamps here in Milwaukee. This has always been the main staple of our mission - taking action on behalf of the preborn right outside the doors of death! We are there every day they murder them. Nearly every week there are those who turn from this killing because of our simple efforts.

Finally, we have been waging a campaign against abortionist Stewart Kernes here in Milwaukee for the last four months. He actually murders preborn children in two different states and four cities. On the back of this page is an announcement of a demonstration we will conduct outside his church. Please pray for this effort, and consider joining if able!

Thank you so much for your support of our efforts! It is greatly needed and appreciated!

May the Lamb that was slain receive the reward of His suffering!

Pastor Matt Treuhella

JIM POUILLON MEMORIAL/DREAM CRUISE TOUR REPORT

August 18-21, 2010

For a more detailed report, which includes many photographs and links to news stories, go to MissionariesToThePreborn.com

Jim Pouillon, a Christian brother and pro-life activist, was shot and killed outside a Michigan high school last September, while speaking up for the preborn children. The man who murdered him was recently sentenced to life in prison. He didn't like the photographs of the murdered preborn that Jim displayed.

We decided to go back again this year and conduct the Tour in honor of Jim. We staged a 4-day tour which included stops in Owosso (where Jim was slain), at the State's Capitol, and the Woodward Dream Cruise. One thing we did NOT encounter on this tour was – indifference! It was - no small stir!

Jim Pouillon on the streets with us during our Dream Cruise Tour on August 13, 2009.

Our truthtruck outside the Capitol.

A team of less than 30 assembled for this effort. All of the stops we made at intersections were very busy. We also did a stop outside the Michigan State Capitol to greet the legislators and their staffs as they arrived. The Personhood Amendment in Michigan is bottled up in the Judiciary Committee and we gathered to call upon them to act on the bill and get it out of Committee for a full vote. The building was abuzz about our efforts!

The view in Port Huron, Michigan. All our stops were thick with traffic.

Cal Zastrow speaks to the group where Jim was shot. The group prayed there too.

We stopped in Owosso, Michigan where Jim Pouillon lived and where he was killed. We stopped at noon outside the Planned Parenthood where he was often seen. Then we stopped at the main intersection of town (very busy) where he was often seen speaking up for the helpless preborn, declaring the truth of God's Word.

The next morning, Friday, August 20th, we split the group and went to two different killing-centers in Detroit. Both were open. The staff at both were clearly rattled by our presence and the police were called to both places.

The last day of the Tour was the Woodward Dream Cruise where over a million people gather to consume themselves with cars. We went back this year because the last request we had made to us from Jim Pouillon before he was shot was that we would return to do the Cruise. Rain cut our time short to only three hours, but nevertheless the impact was made and much literature was distributed, and our truthtrucks kept driving down Woodward Ave. past the hundreds of thousands watching the Cruise.

The press covered us along the Tour.

We cannot thank the Lord enough for the opportunity to speak up for our preborn neighbor! May He use our simple efforts exceedingly, abundantly, beyond all we could ask or think!!!

Anti-abortion group demonstrates near Waukesha doctor's home

Saturday rally draws more than 60 volunteers

By Dave Fidlin
Special to The Freeman

TOWN OF WAUKESHA – Walking the streets of a town of Waukesha neighborhood, they held up graphic signs of aborted fetuses and shared why they felt a medical procedure – legalized in the 1973 landmark Roe vs. Wade case – is unethical.

Missionaries to the Preborn, a Milwaukee-based anti-abortion group, strategically decided to walk the streets of this neighborhood Saturday morning because a doctor specializing in obstetrics and gynecology lives within it. The doctor, whose name and area of residence are not being divulged by The Freeman, performs abortions at clinics in the Milwaukee and Rockford, Ill., areas.

"We want to be here to let people know they have a neighbor who performs abortions," said Jim Soderna, a spokesman for the organization that helped initiate the demonstration. "We're hoping people can encourage this doctor to find another job that doesn't involve abortions."

The organization frequently holds demonstrations in high-profile areas, including Highway 100 in West Allis and near Mayfair Mall in Wauwatosa, but it also holds demonstrations within neighborhoods to get its message across.

Saturday's rally drew between 60 and 70 volunteers. Soderna said some demonstrators came from such far-off locales as Illinois and Virginia – thanks, in part, to a call for participation through the group's Facebook page.

The group's tactics – namely displaying the graphic images – have caught the ire of some abortion rights groups, including NARAL Pro-Choice America. In an interview with The Freeman last week, Lisa Subeck, NARAL Pro-Choice Wisconsin executive director, said groups such as Missionaries to the Preborn use extremist, harassing tactics to get their message across.

But leaders within Missionaries to the Preborn naturally hold a different perspective to those claims.

"We will display photographs of those who have been victims ... so that people can see just how brutal and horrible (the doctor's killing is," said the Rev. Matt Trehwella, Missionaries to the Preborn founder, in a statement. "Our hope is that (the Waukesha doctor) will be ashamed of his deeds and put down his bloody scalpel."

Reaction by residents to Saturday's demonstration was mixed, but Soderna said the feedback had been overwhelmingly positive. At least one resident, with children present, expressed dismay that the graphic images were being displayed with young ones out and about. But other residents expressed surprise that they lived near someone who performs abortions.

Missionaries to the Preborn describes itself as a Christian-based organization and gleans its mission statement from passages in the Bible.

"Just because it's legal doesn't make it right," Soderna said.

While the organization protests abortion, Soderna said the goal is for the group to get its message across in a loving manner. After each demonstration, the group routinely prays quietly.

DEBT, DEPENDENCY, AND THE AMERICAN EDUCATION INDUSTRY

A Plea for Self-Initiative and Maturity

by Pastor Matt Trehwella

In America today, everyone thinks you should just go to college after you're done with high school. Parents just assume it is their duty to make sure their child goes off to the university. Very little thought goes into this decision – other than which university.

I want to proffer the idea that maybe one should not go to college at all. Statistically, over 65% of college graduates never use the degree they received when they go out to work in the real world. In order to get their degree, the average college graduate accumulates $24,000.00 of debt. Those who go on to graduate studies is routinely well over $100,000.00.

How can it be wise to start off one's life tens of thousands of dollars in debt, especially for a piece of paper which – statistically – you're probably not going to use? The Bible repeatedly exhorts us to avoid debt (Prov. 22:7; Rom. 13:8; etc).

Christians need to end the 'I gotta go to college; I gotta find a job' mentality. Most people walk around with the 'I gotta go to college; I gotta find a job' mentality because they have no self-initiative. They'd rather be led around by the nose and hand all their life by society – rather than strike out on their own and risk making something of themselves.

They like living in a nation addicted to mediocrity. They like going-along to get-along. They like the comfort, ease, and wealth that the system has created, namely, go to college; get a good paying job; live my life out in self-centered fatness - and leave no mark on the earth whatsoever that I was ever here.

The education industry in America wants you dependent on them. They want you to think you need them. "But the only way to get a good paying job in America is if you go and get a college degree" so says my critic. A fair trade I suppose – you get their degree so that you get paid well (supposedly) – if all you're interested in is money. You only have to trade your strength, your creativity, your independent thought, and your self-initiative for their comfort, ease, and wealth.

Do you know how old the youngest Pony Express rider was? Eleven years old. Many of them were teen-agers. The education industry in America doesn't like young people getting such notions. They want to perpetuate adolescence. They want to keep all young people in high school (a hundred years ago only 10% of the population attended high school), and now they want to keep all young people in college for another four years (when I was growing up in the 1960's, only 10% of Americans went to college, now 63% attend).

The result is perpetual adolescence. Young people ever learning (playing), but never coming to manhood or womanhood. Because of the 'system,' young people do not take on responsibility and mature.

Because of this newly created extension of childhood (called adolescence), teen-agers in most homes do not have any significant productive role in the family or in the wider general economy. This creates an “identity crisis.” Their biological maturity is not matched by any social maturity. They are denied the maturation process and responsibility, and are left in a no-man’s land between childhood and adulthood, as their “education” goes on ad nauseam.

I always tell my children, “If you’re not called into the ministry, then build your own business.” Avoid debt in doing so. If you’re thinking, “Oh, but how can I do that,” the education industry has already made you into the helpless waif they want you to become.

Christians need to oppose State licensure for various jobs/trades. Christians need to set the standard in academia and give up the golden calf of State accreditation. Christian families and churches need to equip, instruct, and motivate Christian young people to enter the business world, rather than just the social-engineering of the college world.

Finally, Christian parents need to quit just assuming God wants their little Johnny or Jessica to go off to college and make good money. When I was young, we put our faces low to the ground and cried out to the Lord – asking Him what He wanted us to do with our lives. This is what is of paramount importance.
